§ 14. Final provisions

1. The Administrator reserves the right to introduce changes to the content of these Terms. The Administrator shall inform of all changes to these Terms seven days in advance on the main page of the Portal.

2. Users who do not accept the changed provisions of these Terms should cease to use the Portal and the Services provided by it.
3. These Terms and Conditions shall be in effect from 11th December 2017.

Information about particular threats associated with the use of services provided electronically

In performance of the duty placed on him by Art. 6(1) of the Electronic Services Provision Act of 18 July 2002 (OJ L No. 144, item 1204 with amendments), the Administrator hereby informs of the particular threats associated with the use of services provided electronically.

This information concerns threats which may arise only potentially, but which should be taken into consideration regardless of the measures taken by the Administrator to protect the Administrator's infrastructure from the unauthorized activity of third parties.

Among the primary threats associated with using the Internet are:

- malware – various applications or scripts of a damaging, criminal or malicious impact on the telecomputer system of an internet user, such as viruses, worms, Trojans, key loggers, dialers;
- spyware – software which tracks the activities of a user, which collects information about a user, and sends it – generally without the user's knowledge or consent – to the author of the software;
- spam – unwanted and unordered electronic correspondence sent to many recipients simultaneously, often containing commercial messages;
- phishing – fraudulently obtaining personal information (e.g. passwords) by pretending to represent a trustworthy person or institution;
- breaking into telecomputer systems by the use of such tools as exploit and rootkit.

In order to avoid the aforementioned threats, a user should equip his computer and other electronic devices used to connect to the internet with anti-virus software. This software should be maintained on an ongoing basis.

Users of services provided electronically may also protect themselves from associated threats by:

- employing a firewall,
- updating all software,
- not opening e-mail attachments from an unknown source,
- carefully reading the installation notices of software, including licenses,
- disabling macros in MS Office files from unknown sources,
- regularly running system scans with anti-virus and anti-malware software,
- encrypting data transmissions,
- installation of protective software (detection and prevention of unauthorized access),
- using original systems and software from legal sources.
